

Find Reliable Information About Swine Flu on the Web

Center for Disease Control's webpage on Swine Flu: www.cdc.gov/h1n1flu/

The CDC's page includes a description of the disease and the steps that the CDC is currently taking to combat it. This page tracks current infection rates by state. Also includes information about what you can do to stay healthy and a link to follow the CDC's progress on Twitter.

CDC: H1N1 Flu (Swine flu) and travel <http://wwwn.cdc.gov/travel/contentSwineFlu.aspx>

Wondering whether or not you should let the swine flu outbreak affect your travel plans? This page provides guidance from the CDC.

CDC: Preventing the flu: good habits can help stop germs<http://www.cdc.gov/flu/protect/habits.htm>

The CDC offers tips for preventing flu infection.

Medlineplus: Swine Flu www.nlm.nih.gov/medlineplus/swineflu.html

Explains in simple terms what swine flu is and how you can protect yourself.

Pandemicflu.gov www.pandemicflu.gov

Managed by the US Dept. of Health & Human Services, this website pulls together information about swine, avian and other types of flu pandemics.

Texas Department of State Health Services: H1N1 Flu (Swine Flu)

<http://www.dshs.state.tx.us/swineflu/default.shtm>

Find out what the State of Texas is doing to combat swine flu. This page also includes news updates on the disease.

US Dept. of State: Travel alert http://travel.state.gov/travel/cis_pa_tw/pa/pa_mexico_swine_flu.html

The State Department published a travel alert for travel to Mexico.

World Health Organization: Swine Influenza Frequently Asked Questions

http://www.who.int/csr/swine_flu/swine_flu_faq_26april.pdf

This pdf document published by WHO explains how people get swine flu, how the disease moved from pigs to people, and what the pandemic risk of the disease may be.

The Great Pandemic: the United States in 1918-1919 <http://1918.pandemicflu.gov/>

This web exhibit gives a historical account of the Spanish Influenza epidemic of 1918. It is hosted by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.