JOB SEARCH WEBSITES

Beyond.com – Known as “the world’s largest network of niche career communities”, Beyond allows users to search for local jobsites all at once.

Careerbuilder.com – CareerBuilder offers job searchers a fully interactive job search engine. Users can build a profile, submit a resume, search for jobs, find job fairs and network through message boards and other online communities.

Craigslist.org – In addition to being a great online classifieds resource, this site also helps job hunters search for jobs within their immediate vicinity.

Indeed.com – This is a meta job search engine meaning it searches multiple jobsites and other job search engines simultaneously. Indeed.com is good at uncovering position openings you wouldn’t normally find on a regular jobsite and offers first time users a simple path to getting started.

Jobster.com – Basically a job search engine which is also a headhunter and social networking site, Jobster uses an active approach to help job hunters and employers find each other.

Jobsearch.com – This job searching network is sponsored by the US Department of Labor and Public Employment service

Jobs-to-Careers.com—A very simple site which allows for locally tailored job hunting in a specific geographic area.

LinkedIn.com—LinkedIn is a social networking site for jobseekers which offers a number of services for professionals including instant profile data and multiple networking tools to get your name out there.

Monster.com – A top-tier, well-respected job search engine allowing you to input desired employers as well as limit your search by job type, location and salary range. Also offers networking boards, job search alerts and online resume posting.

OnTargetjobs.com – OnTarget is a meta job search engine specializing in careers in the health professions, but it also displays a wide variety of jobs in all vocational and professional sectors. The site is networked with other smaller medical career jobsites and contains an expansive database of job openings.

Oodle.com – This is a very user-friendly site specializing in online classifieds which includes a job classifieds section that finely cuts job opportunities down to job title, category, industry and company.

Simplyhired.com – This site is a meta search engine which searches multiple jobsites and job listings at the same time. It also offers job hunters the opportunity to send out their resumes directly to specific employers.

Snagajob.com – This site focuses on jobs which pay by the hour, allowing users to search for up-to-date openings of both full and part-time jobs in their area.

Twitter.com—Although Twitter is probably one of the best social networking tools in the world, it’s also a great site for job seekers. You may need to supplement your account with a blog or resume, but either way it is a great way to get your name out there.

USAJobs.com – This is the official job site for the Federal Government which offers a wide variety of full and part-time positions as well as internships.

Yahoo! Hotjobs – www.hotjobs.yahoo.com—The Yahoo! search engine’s personalized job hunting site is one of the largest on the web. Users can search a vast catalog of job openings from all over the world and are even able to view how many times their resum has been viewed by a prospective employer.
